NUMB. 222

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1744.

Prague, August 22.

VER Y possible Precaution has been taken to put this City in the best Posture of Defence possible; and to say the Truth, we are, our late Misfortunes considered, in a better Condition than could be well expected; but it must however be allow'd, that abundance of our principal Citizens being miss'd in a manner by the late Siege, are in no Condition to furnish themselves with six Months Provision, which is thought requisite for sustaining this, and therefore are preparing to retire to other Places. As to the Conspiracy that has been lately detected here, it was concerted amongst 16 or 17 Bavarians, some of whom are indeed old Inhabitants; but Men who were always excessively addicted to the Service of their natural Prince. Some People think they will be severely punisht; and others, that they will be sent Prisoners into Hungary; which, however, is not probable, since the Bavarians that are already Prisoners in that Kingdom, labour incessantly in stirring up Tumults and Seditions; so that many People think, they will be again transferred from Hungary to some other Place, perhaps, to Tyrol, till the War is over.

Venice, August 23. A Report has for some time prevail'd, as if her Majesty would very soon order the Secretary of Prussia to quit this City; but the wisest People here are of quite another Opinion. For tho' it be true, that her Majesty is very far from being unprepared against this Invasion, yet it is likewise very certain, that the Court has no great Reason to be pleas'd with the Disposition of some German Potentates; who are far enough from doing, what, on many Accounts, her Majesty had Reason to expect from them. The Arts make us of at Franckfort, to cajole some, and to intimidate other Princes, have done more than could have been imagined; and therefore there is no Reason to carry Tongue with a high Hand, or to blow the Flame of Recklessness higher than it has already risen. There are, however, not a few of the wisest and best Patriots in Germany, who adhere steadily to the Queen of Hungary; and we still flatter ourselves that his Polish Majesty, and the Elector of Cologne, are in that Number. The latter, while he was at Hamburg, shew'd the greatest Inclination to have compromised the Disputes with the House of Bavaria, on Terms agreeable to this Court, and to the Sentiments of all good Germans.

Hamburg, September 1. Before the King of Prussia's Manifesto appeared, his Minister here, when pres'd to declare what he inclined to think of his Master's arming so suddenly, replied, without Hesitation. That he believed he intended to restore the Peace of Germany, by throwing his Weight into the lighter Scale, and supporting that which appeared to him the juster Cause. He added, That when his Master made a separate Treaty with the Queen of Hungary, he was in Hopes her Majesty was disposed to make a general Peace, and that he expected it would very soon have followed that of Breslau; but that, finding all his Attempts to engage the Court of Vienna to listen to any Terms of Accommodation, absolutely vain, and perceiving, that the Success of the Austrian Arms serv'd only to increase the Haughtiness of the Ministry, at least, and encourag'd them to continual Acts of Severity, absolutely incompatible with the Safety of the Empire, he had taken a Resolution of applying the only Remedy that seem'd to be left, tho' much against his Inclination. But our Politicians, in their Commentaries upon this Discourse, thought fit to suggest, that the Progress of the Austrian Arms alarm'd his Prussian Majesty on the Scorce of Silesia, from an apprehension, that if Prince Charles had been able to winter in Aix-la-Chapelle, it would have given the Queen of Hungary such a Superiority, as might have enabled her to engag'd the Empire in her Quarrel; which must have been attended with Consequences that could not have been agreeable to his Prussian Majesty. They still persist in this Opinion, notwithstanding all that is said in that King's Exposition, of the Motives which induc'd him to furnish the Emperor with Auxiliaries; and they particularly observe, that there is one essential Point omitted in that famous Piece, viz. the laying down a Plan of Peace, which it is declar'd, the King of Prussia has taken Arms to restore; for tho' it is said, in that Paper, that the Emperor once offered to renounce his Pretensions on the Austrian Succession, on Condition, that he was restored to his Hereditary Dominions; yet it is not asserted, or so much as intimated, that his Prussian Majesty is still determined to have Peace made upon those Terms.

COUNTRY NEWS.

Newcastle, September 1. On Saturday Morning last, Mr. Johnson, at the Bird in the Bush Inn, in this Town, paid 12 Guineas to one Milburn, for a Bill drawn on him at the Desire of a Gentleman. Milburn inspecting the Gold next Day, after riding about 40 Miles, where he was to pay it, it was refused; upon which, the Person to whom the Bill was payable, set out with Milburn for this Place, and went, immediately, and procured a Warrant from Mr. Alderman Sorsby, to apprehend Johnson; which was accordingly served. And last Tuesday, when the Gold was try'd, it was found to have been put into a Pocket in which was a Parcel of Quicksilver, which had turned its Colour; in Fact, it was good Gold, and the current Coin; whereupon Milburn was reprimanded, paid all Expences, and publickly ask'd Mr. Johnson's Pardon.

The Elements of ALGEBRA, in a New and Easy Method, with their Use and Application, in the Solution of a great Variety of Arithmetical and Geometrical Questions, by General and Universal Rules.

To which is prefix'd, An Introduction containing a succinct History of this Science.

By MR. NATHANIEL HAMMOND, of the Bank.

Extract from the Accounts of this Book in the Works of the Learned.

The World has long complained of the Want of a proper Introduction to Algebra. Some are so very concise, as if they were contriv'd not to teach but introduce a Teacher; others again are larger, but wrote with so little Consideration to the Understandings of such as are altogether unacquainted with the Science, that they are of very little Use to those who are most inclined to make use of them. Whence it comes to pass, that few find it practicable to make any Progress in Algebra without a Master, tho' certainly the Science in itself is far from surpassing a clear Head, and a tolerable Understanding.

The Design of this Treatise, which is of a reasonable Bulk, and which contains nothing which is not solid, and to the Purpose, is to assist such as are engaged in teaching Algebra with a regular Method, and a large Stock of Examples; so that their Scholars may find Employment in their Absence; and to enable such as live in Country-Places, and must consequently want all other Tutors, except Books, to acquire such a Skill in this Science, as may enable them to spend a Portion of their Time agreeably in the Cultivation of their better Parts, and in rendering a natural Method of enquirying after Truth habitual.

The Treatise begins with a copious Explication of the Fundamental Principles of the Art, and of the Signs and Method of Notation used therein. The Author then proceeds to the several Rules, explaining them carefully and copiously in all their various Cases; so that with a moderate Attention it is simply impossible for a Person, who desires to be Master of Algebra, to miss of his End.

We never find this Writer advancing any thing out of its proper Place, or burthening the Mind of his Scholar with Rules, before they become necessary: He professes to have imitated the judicious Euclid in this Respect; and he has done it with equal Art and Felicity. By this means he has delivered the young Student in Algebra from that which is usually the most fatiguing Part of the Science, viz. The Doctrine of Surds, in the Manner in which it is usually taught. By the same Means he leads his Reader directly to Equations; and, by shewing him the Profit he will reap from this Science, encourages him to overcome all its Difficulties. But having thus laid a strong and rational Foundation, he moves more slowly through the rest of his Work, that whoever follow him, may be obliged to become Master of every Branch of the Art, so as to be a compleat Algebraist, before he quits his Book, and not a Smatterer.

Quadrat. Equations, and the Art of managing Converging Series, the admirable Invention of the incomparable Newton, are here so clearly explained, and their several Cases so plainly set down, and so thoroughly explicated, that it may be truly said, there are no where else such Instructions to be met with. At the Clofe of the Book, we find an abundance of Observations, necessary for enlightening such Minds as are willing to proceed still farther in analytic Discoveries;

so that considering the Comps of this Work, and that too is very moderate, it is as complete as possibly can be expected: And he who is thoroughly versed in it, will find no great Difficulties, when he proceeds to sublimer Studies. The Language is plain and natural, the Book is more copious than any other in Examples, and the Illustrations of them are so full and clear, that it is impossible to mistake their Meaning.
